

DEMOCRATIC REPUBLIC OF TIMOR-LESTE IV GOVERNMENT

DECREE LAW No. 24/2008

OF OF

ALTERS THE PROVISIONING JUDICIAL REGIME

The Provisioning Judicial Regime, approved by Decree Law No. 10/2005, of November 2, establishes an essential normative for the country, which are the rules of acquisition of goods and services by the State.

Taking into account the development of the country, the State has been the force behind the economic development not only through the investments in infrastructure but also regarding its own operational expenses, which feed a large part of local businesses in their activities.

Since the approval of this legal regime, the administrative services have strengthened its capacity in this area, which already justifies some level of decentralization of the Department of Finances for other departments and other entities, allowing them to promote some of their own provisioning procedures of the respective service.

Thus, and notwithstanding a general review of the provisioning being in course, it is understood that it is important to immediately seek some decentralization measures that will work as an experience and at the same time, will allow a relief of the Department of Finances of a series of easier procedures, but that imply time, which is essential in the treatment of more structured purchase processes.

Thus,

The Government decrees, under the terms of paragraph e) of No. 1 of Article 115 and paragraphs a) and d) of article 116, of the Republic's Constitution, to have the value of law, the following:

Article 43

2. In this procedure, the choice of the adjudicator of the contract belongs to the Public Service itself without tendering procedure.

Article 86
Evaluation and choice in tendering procedures

1. The main objective in tendering procedures is the selection of goods, services and constructions, with the best quality/price ratio, where the purchasing price is only one of the criteria in the choice of the adjudicator.
2. The cost/benefit relationship implies in a comparison of costs/benefits among the alternatives and the best result for the Government must take into account the costs and benefits during the economic life of each good, service, construction or consultancy during the respective economic durability and not only at the moment of purchase.
3. The essential criteria to be taken into consideration in the analysis of the proposals, based on the best cost/benefit, are the following:
 - a) Technical and professional analysis, in other words, the susceptibility of the good or service of fulfilling the functional and performance requisites, taking into consideration the following factors:
 - b) Meet the essential and desirable requisites;
 - c) Client service, including the support and maintenance of the good's durability;

- a) The capital costs, including purchase price, assembly, initial operation and training, including:
 - b) Operational costs such as, salaries, maintenance, energy costs and license costs;

These costs must be reduced to a series of common factors that make the rational comparison of the proposals easier.

For the quotations that exceed 100.000 USD a declaration of commitment from the candidates is required and must accentuate the commitment of creating local jobs; the transference of knowledge and technology to local workers and the proportion of goods and services acquired at a local level and that must be part of the contract's annex with the adjudicator.
8. The provisioning services must develop provisioning criteria, based on the principles of this article, appropriate for the tendering procedures, where numeric scales must be created for these evaluation criteria. The financial analyses, which specify the costs, do not count as points. The general rules and the specifications of each tendering procedure must integrate each tendering document. And the specific evaluation criteria will also have to be included in the tendering invitations.

9. The proposals must be submitted in two envelopes; envelope number one must respond to the professional and technical criteria, commercial and industrial analysis and local development. Envelope number two must contain the value of the proposal.
10. The competitors must be integrated in a final list based on the capacity of meeting the requisites foreseen for the criteria of envelope number one. This demonstrates the Government's commitment to give the maximum priority to the value instead of the price, through the company's professional and technical capacity, the respective commercial stability and the capacity to improve the Timor-Leste's local and regional development. Only afterwards will the jury consider the content of the financial cost included in envelope number two.
11. Envelope number two will be opened relatively to the first two classified in the short list.
12. The chosen candidate will be evaluated based on the meeting of the foreseen criteria in envelope number one and the underlined price in envelope number two.
13. The Secretary of Finances must promote periodic audits in order to verify the fulfillment of the provisioning norms foreseen in this article.

Article 91 Of the Procedure by quoting requests
